

Preprint Policy of the Animal Bioscience

The Animal Bioscience accepts a submission of a manuscript that has been uploaded in a non-peer reviewed preprint server with Digital Object Identifier (DOI) assignment. A preprint is a draft version of a manuscript made available online before or at a submission stage to the peer-review-based journal. Authors should follow the guidelines below to submit a preprinted manuscript to the Animal Bioscience:

- Authors should provide information of a preprint including DOI and licensing to the editorial office when submitting a manuscript to the Animal Bioscience.
- Once the manuscript is accepted, at the [in editing] stage in the Animal Bioscience, authors should update the preprint record with the Animal Bioscience publication reference information including the DOI and URL link provided by the Animal Bioscience.